English Story

The consequences arrived in the kitchen. Everyone in the central company could see the change in the food: brown rice instead of white, a drop of coffee in the morning, and a cheese sandwich instead of a chocolate bar. “The ingredient is not the point,” the physician said. “The mood is.” Thus the board asked a firm from the agency to give the club a new menu.

The crucial question was the stove. A cooker that nobody had cleaned, a bundle of herbs in a silver clip, and a garbage bin beside the window: the condition of the kitchen decided the appetite of the whole team. “You cannot play on a hungry lung,” the cook said. “You can only look at the window and wish.”

The stimulus was not the chocolate but the way it was given. A mild powder, a fraction of a banana, and a yoghurt with lemonade were enough for a stressful afternoon; a drastic bundle of stimulants was not. “A nerve is not a toy,” the physician wrote to the general manager. “A stimulant taken impulsively is a debt.”

The deterioration of one player scared them all. A tumor the size of a staple, a lung full of dioxide, and an atomic scan later, the club joined the union of clubs that had asked for a national consolidation of the data. The utilization of the gym had to be examined, and the broom in the corner became a symbol.

The headmistress of the local school, a member of the board, asked the question that closed the meeting: “What do you give a body that has no appetite?” The answer was a kitchen with a window, a stove that worked, and a routine that did not depend on the mood of the cosmos. The side of the argument that nobody wanted to hear was the only one that could be defended. The defense of the old kitchen was that the drug of habit is cheap; the daily grind of cooking for fifty people, however, was not intact. “You cannot buy stimulation in a packet without becoming impulsive,” the headmistress said. A broom, a staple gun, and a packet of chocolate were the only tools left in the room, and the physician wrote down every item.

后果出现在厨房里。中央公司的每个人都能看到食物的变化：白米换成糙米，早上加一滴咖啡，巧克力棒换成奶酪三明治。“成分不是重点，”内科医师说，“心情才是。”因此董事会请了一家代理机构为俱乐部制定新菜单。

关键的问题是炉灶。一台没人清洗过的炊具、一捆夹在银色夹子里的香草、窗边一个垃圾桶：厨房的状况决定了整支队伍的食欲。“你不能靠一副饥饿的肺去比赛，”厨师说，“你只能看着窗户，然后许愿。”

刺激物不是巧克力，而是它被给予的方式。一点温和的粉末、一小片香蕉和一份加了柠檬水的酸奶，就足以应付一个紧张的下午；一大捆兴奋剂则不行。“神经不是玩具，”医师写信给总经理说，“冲动地服下兴奋剂就是欠债。”

一名球员的病情恶化让他们都害怕了。一个订书钉大小的肿瘤、一肺的二氧化物，以及一次原子扫描之后，俱乐部加入了一个向国家申请数据统一整理的俱乐部联盟。体育馆的利用情况必须被审查，而角落里的那把扫帚成了一个象征。

当地学校的女校长、董事会成员，问出了结束会议的那个问题：“你给一具没有食欲的身体什么？”答案是：一间有窗的厨房、一台能用的炉子，以及一套不取决于宇宙心情的日常。论证中没人愿意听的那一面，恰恰是唯一站得住脚的那一面。为旧厨房辩护的说法是：习惯这种药很便宜；然而，为五十个人做饭的日常苦役并不是毫发无损的。“你无法买一包刺激物而不变得冲动，”女校长说。屋里只剩下一把扫帚、一把订书机和一包巧克力，而内科医师把每一样都记了下来。
